

Food Safety Manager Certification Class

Presented by:
 Mendocino County Health and Human Services Agency
 Environmental Health Division
 In Conjunction with the National Registry of Food Safety Professionals™

California law requires at least one owner or one employee in every food establishment to be certified as a Food Safety Manager every 5 years.

If you work in a food establishment, you know how important return customers are to your business. Did you know it only takes one foodborne illness outbreak to permanently damage your business's reputation?

Our one-day course on food safety will teach you:

- The importance of proper handwashing and personal hygiene in food establishments
- How foodborne illnesses occur and how to prevent them from happening in your establishment and to your customers
- How to avoid Cross-Contamination of foods
- Time-Temperature Abuse of foods
- The major sources of foodborne illness
- What is FAT TOM? And many other important food safety topics...
